Chef Wolfgang Puck adds pizzazz and nutrition to student food options

Newly created recipes to be "kid-tested" during National School Lunch Week

LAS VEGAS – World-renowned chef Wolfgang Puck continues to make his mark on the Clark County School District food service program, coinciding with National School Lunch Week, October 13-17.

A highlight of the week will be the unveiling of several new CCSD-oriented creations from Chef Puck on Thursday, October 16 at noon. That's when 20 students from Wolff, Hayden, Gragson and Lummis Elementary Schools will taste-test the new menu items, including chicken chow mein and a cold pasta salad, during a tour of the CCSD Central Kitchen at 6350 East Tropical.

Known for blending innovative tastes with a fresh and healthful approach to cooking, Puck and his culinary team have been working since early 2007 in developing new recipes to enhance the flavor and nutrition of school-day lunches.

According to CCSD Food Service Supervisor Sue Hoggan, "Chef Puck and his team of award-winning chefs have created an effective partnership with the school district, building a comprehensive program to create more nutritious, great-tasting dishes for our school cafeterias while providing techniques to promote healthy eating for children."
