

James Rensvold, a 2002 graduate of Clark High School, was the recipient of the 2009 National Academy Foundation's Advisory Board Champion award. Rensvold received his recognition at a gala event held in the Desert Ridge Marriott Hotel in Phoenix, Arizona.

Rensvold was in of the first class of students who completed all four years in the Academy of Finance magnet program at Clark High School. During his high school career, he was a leader in the Academy and served an internship with Wells Fargo Bank. This internship led to a position with Wells Fargo after graduation. He worked for the bank while attending college, and later earned a branch manager position with Community Bank of Nevada. Rensvold is now employed by Nevada State Bank.

Throughout his post-high school graduation years, Rensvold maintained close ties with the Academy of Finance at Clark High School. He has mentored several Academy students, given classroom presentations on finance-related topics, and currently serves on the Advisory Board of the Academy of Finance and on the board of the Clark High School Alumni Leadership Circle.

The National Academy Foundation, a non-profit organization founded by Sanford Weill, Chairman Emeritus of Citigroup, Inc., is a partnership of business leaders and educators to support the development of America's youth toward personal and professional success in high school, higher education, and throughout their careers.
