Dear Secondary School Student:

The value of an education is well documented. Research has confirmed that the lack of a high school diploma adversely affects a person's ability to attain employment, limits career opportunities, and may result in lower wages. A variety of educational opportunities exist for the young adult who chooses not to pursue a high school diploma through traditional means, may be credit deficient, or may have been removed from school due to behavior. The Education Services Division is dedicated to helping students who are credit deficient and may require a fifth year of high school to complete their high school diploma. Please refer to the following information regarding alternative educational options. School counselors located at the sites listed will assist you in finding the most suitable program to meet your educational needs.

With three locations in Clark County, Acceleration Academies offers an open cafe-style setting, laptop computers, wraparound support system of educators, life and career coaches, and mentors to help remove barriers that cause students to struggle in a traditional setting. Working in partnership with the Clark County School District (CCSD), this free program serves former students who dropped out of high school in Grades 9–12. This program is not designed to be in lieu of behavior school. For additional information, visit www.accelerationacademy.org, or call (872) 529-5115.
